Unless specifically noted, the individual remarks recorded herein have not been transcribed verbatim. Individual remarks as reported herein have not been submitted to the individuals appearing before the committee for editing or corrections.
Walt Chappell spoke in favor of HB2292 expressing concern about the way Kansas education has been taken over by the federal government. (Attachment 1) (Attachment 2) (Attachment 3)

Dr. Mary Byrne supported HB2292 emphasizing the Kansas constitution clearly states the legislature has the right to disapprove standards adopted by the State Board of Education and referring to the recent Oklahoma Supreme Court opinion supporting this stance in that state. Dr. Byrne also provided information related to the National Association of State Boards of Education (NASBE) and its involvement with standards issues. (Attachment 4) (Attachment 5)

Ze'ev Wurman gave support for HB2292 referring to the national ranking score drop as indicators of the lack of success of Common Core standards in Kansas. Mr. Wurman referred to the cost of making a change in standards now and said it should be done because the standards provide a poor education. In his opinion, former Kansas standards showed better outcomes and the legislature should not be afraid to fall back to them. (Attachment 6) (Attachment 7)

Frank Clark spoke in favor of HB2292 giving his concerns about Common Core standards and related issues. (Attachment 8)

Jeffrey Locke spoke as a public school teacher in favor of HB2292 stating Common Core goes against the meta-cognitive learning of students. (Attachment 9)

David Dorsey supported HB2292 stating he believes in strong standards but believes that, because the Common Core standards are not written to be age appropriate, there will be a drop in outcomes overall and a widening of the gap that already exists in outcomes for at-risk students. (Attachment 10)

Hosanna Myers appeared as a proponent of HB2292 referring to her grandmother's experience in the German education system under Adolf Hitler and expressing her grandmother's concern that the same is being repeated in the United States today in the way the Common Core standards have been established. (Attachment 11)

John Axtell supported HB2292 speaking of his success in working with an individualized teaching approach that would not be allowed under Common Core standards and giving his opinion the bill will put parents back in charge of curriculum and student privacy. (Attachment 12)

Lisa Huesers spoke in favor of HB2292 noting Common Core standards are supported by entities which find it difficult to provide substantive reasons for their support. Ms. Huesers also expressed her concern that those representing the best interest of the students, the parents, are not given full access to information about data collected on those students and that the data being collected is not properly secured. Unless specifically noted, the individual remarks recorded herein have not been transcribed verbatim. Individual remarks as reported herein have not been submitted to the individuals appearing before the committee for editing or corrections.
Deena Horst opposed HB2292 pointing out the bill requires Kansas schools to fall back to standards written in 2003, requires a test that no longer exists and could negatively affect innovative school districts which have moved toward using alternate tests. Ms. Horst encouraged a partnership between the State Board of Education and legislators in working together to find the best standards for Kansas. (Attachment 82)

Brad Neuenswander spoke in opposition to HB2292 referring to the Department of Education effort to draw from the public input on what standards should be and indicating the annual cost for professional development, materials and curriculum of approximately fifty million dollars would have been for naught for the past four to five years. He encouraged dialogue between the legislature and the Department of Education regarding standards. (Attachment 83)

Ken Weaver expressed concerns about HB2292 referring to the gap between the view of high school teachers regarding how ready their students are for college-level studies and the view of college faculties on the students' college-readiness. Mr. Weaver supports the current standards as providing the rigor need to eliminate this gap and asked the committee to allow education to continue on the course already set. (Attachment 84)
David Barnes spoke as a teacher and parent against HB2292 referencing his experience in helping to write the standards for math and science and speaking of his confidence that the standards will help his children for college. (Attachment 85) (Attachment 86)

Dr. Marty Stessman referred to the differences in the world today and how that relates to students. He emphasized that standards are just standards, not curriculum. What the teacher does and teaches in the classroom is the curriculum. He encouraged opposition to HB2292. (Attachment 87)

Fred Hollingshead spoke of his experience in being present when the national standards were first seen and in being involved in writing the current standards. During this process, he did not perceive any expectation from the Department of Education that the Common Core standards be adopted. He is opposed to HB2292. (Attachment 88)

Rick Doll spoke of unintended consequences which could happen with the passage of HB2292 and expressed his opposition of the bill as a shotgun approach that would be contrary to the law. (Attachment 89)

Tammy Bartels felt passage of HB2292 would make the state vulnerable to litigation because she does not believe the legislature has the authority to effect standards. She urged committee members to vote 'no' on the bill. (Attachment 90)

Harry McDonald agreed with other opponents to HB2292 that not being able to teach to current standards would be detrimental to Kansas students. (Attachment 91)

Dr. Teresa San Martin opposed HB2292 urging the committee to wait for possible developments at the federal level that could return more flexibility to the states and expressing her concern that education in Kansas needs the stability of a long-term vision that could be lost by the changes required under this bill. (Attachment 92)

Mark Desetti spoke in opposition to HB2292 stating it is too broad and would require a complete re-tooling of the educational approach in Kansas. (Attachment 93)

Written testimony in opposition to HB2292 was submitted by:

Abby Hedrick, teacher, Paola Schools (Attachment 94)
