

Definition of “Significantly Subaverage General Intellectual Functioning”; Senate Sub. for HB 2049

Senate Sub. for HB 2049 amends the statutory definition of “significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning” to require that a standardized intelligence test used to determine this condition must take into account the standard error of measurement. The bill also provides that this condition may be established by means in addition to standardized intellectual testing. The bill amends the definition of “intellectual disability” to remove the ages during which the condition must manifest. The bill specifies the amendments are to be construed and applied retroactively.
